RABBI'S CORNER

Parashat Mattot begins with laws concerning vows and oaths, then we read about the war against the Midianites, including the distribution of spoils. The Reubenites and Gadites ask for the land east of the Jordan. Moses agrees to their request after Reuben, Gad and half of the tribe of Manasseh promise to participate in the conquest of Canaan.

Parashat Mas'ey describes the Israelites' wilderness wanderings, beginning with Ramses in Egypt up to the steps of Moab across the Jordan from Jericho. There is an additional warning to uproot idol worship from Canaan and instructions on dividing Canaan among nine-and-a-half tribes.

Following a list of the tribal heads, the Torah decrees that forty-eight cities are to be given to the Levites.

There are final discussions concerning the ruling that the daughters of Zelophchad could inherit their father's portion of the Land. At the end of the 4th Book of the Torah, Bemidbar, we see how Moses changes the law concerning the daughters of Zelophchad and the settlement of Reubenites, Gadites and half of the tribe of Manasseh, showing an incredible flexibility of Jewish Law which has continued until today.
